PROLOGUE

The true and lasting greatness of the United States must not rest on material things but on the ideals that this country has stood for and attempted to put in practice. The history of the United States has been a bold and exciting experiment in founding a society on faith in human intelligence, human freedom, and human brotherhood. So far---this experiment has been a success. Its future success depends on the intelligence, goodwill and sense of responsibility of the coming generations. Realizing this tremendous responsibility that will soon be ours, Nixon High School has endeavored to give its students a broad knowledge of democracy, a solid foundation for leadership, and a firm basis for American citizenship. And so it is only proper and fitting that we recognize these efforts and choose our theme to be Americanism.

The W Bar is dedicated to a person who has inspired us all by devoting his entire life to the development of education in the Laredo Public Schools. As a physical education teacher, principal, and superintendent, he has continually planned the educational program in our city and has been the most potent of all indirect influences in the development of our citizenry. We are proud to be a part of the school that bears his name. We are proud to name our yearbook The W Bar, his own cattle brand. We are proud to dedicate the 1967 W Bar to Mr. J.W. Nixon, Superintendent of Laredo Public Schools.

Mr. Nixon Receives Carl Bredt Award

SENIORS ENTER FINAL YEAR AT NIXON HIGH SCHOOL

As we leave the campus for the last time we pause, and take a thoughtful backward glance at the things that are now only memories.

Our Sophomore year in shiny new buildings when we were the target of warning looks from the faculty and staff that said, "Keep your hands off the walls, the windows, the ceiling..."

The vaguely sad sweet smell of the autumn nights when we cheered and cheered in the light-flooded stands—Who are the Mustangs? We are the Mustangs. What kind of Mustangs? Fighting Mustangs.

The happiness at good times, tears at low grades, and tired looks on Friday.

Sprayed hair, baggy eyes, and sleepless nights of slumber parties.

The traditional privileges, and ceremonies of our Senior year and finally, before we realized it—graduation—final instructions, final rewards, and final goodbyes—the end and the beginning.

A FOOTBALL COACH'S PRAYER

I suppose I shall ask for flashy backs
Whose hips are in constant swivel,
And whose speed and dash make people say
"Boy, they run to beat the divil."

I ought to include a massive line
With chasis like big Mack trucks,
Whose brute strength scares all opponents
And drops them like sitting ducks.

I could ask for a team with precision
Whose efforts would all honors take,
But, Lord, I'm an understanding coach----
The talent can't all be mine------
So, if you will give me the things I ask,
I'll never complain or whine.

Just give me a bunch of eager young guys
With the spirit and fight to win,
Who will battle as soon as they take the field
And never, never, give in.

Make them ready to go with the kickoff,
Don't let them fall back in a rut;
The thing they'll need most of all,
Is an infinite stockpile of guts.

I also plead for a squad with brains
So what if the other team beats them with weight,
And has subs by the dozens or more----
Just don't let my boys ever lay down,
Make them give all they've got I implore.

My Coach's heart will be filled with pride
And my hat will no longer fit,
Though we may lose every game,
I'll be pleased as punch,
Just so long as my boys never quit.

Girls Physical Education

Calisthenics is a part of every physical education. The President's physical fitness program is always stressed.

To the Class of 1967

WELCOME, WE NEED YOU

All over this land of ours, class after graduating class of young Americans is taking the long step from preparation to performance. Someone hands them a parchment scroll, and in that moment they pass from the pleasant world of the possible to the demanding world of the actual.

What should one say to these young people? I think we should say to them: Members of the Class of 1967, Welcome to trouble, and uncertainty, and danger. Our nation is prosperous and powerful, but it is also a beleaguered fortress in a hostile world. We have more enemies than friends.

What is your generation going to do? And what is the answer? The answer is people.

We need people who are honest, honest with the fierce intolerance that considers a lie contemptible and a broken promise a black disgrace.

We need people who are bold, who are stimulated by danger, who can take the calculated risk and lose—if necessary, lose everything but the willingness to take the risk again.

We need people with a passion for work, for that satisfaction that comes from achieving the difficult, or even attempting the impossible.

We need gay people, warm people who love life, people who have ideas that can bring change. We need people with imagination, and humor and curiosity and love of the beautiful that transcends national boundaries and makes them citizens of the world.

We need people who are patriotic, not with blind deceit that can see no good in other nations, but with awareness that love of country is essential.

And where do such people come from? They come from the heart and soul of any nation that remains capable of judging itself, of demanding sacrifices when necessary, of insisting that its citizens keep trying to be better than they are.

Since this country was founded, every generation has had its quota of such people. Your generation will produce them too, but there must be more than before because the tides of history run faster and the need is greater than ever before.

Members of the Class of 1967, freedom is not just a privilege, it is a test—and those who cannot pass the test will be denied it. WELCOME, then to the proving ground. Bring with you all the courage and vitality you can muster.

You are going to need them—just as your country is going to need you.

EPILOGUE

We, the Staff of the W Bar of 1967, have striven to create a yearbook to be used as a memory album and history book highlighting the past school year.

If you are filled with pleasant memories when you glance through or linger over these pages, then we, the Staff, shall happily smile within ourselves. Each minute that we have pondered over words and pictures will be marked as "time well spent."

It is our desire to express our sincere appreciation to our advertisers whose financial assistance has made this book possible and we ask you to patronize them when you can.

As time marches on, may we as citizens accept the challenge to love our country, remembering that good citizenship is a continuous job. May we live our lives to their fullest and best.
